The Rush-Henrietta Central School District is located just minutes south of the city of Rochester. It serves a population of approximately 45,000 residents, encompasses 63 square miles, and includes the communities of Rush, Henrietta, West Brighton and a very small portion of Pittsford. The northern portion of the district is primarily commercial and industrial, with the southern being rural residential with an agricultural base. Most residents of the district are employed in Rochester-area industries and businesses. The district is located in close proximity to several area college campuses including the University of Rochester, Monroe Community College, Rochester Institute of Technology, St. John Fisher College, and Nazareth College. Five elementary schools, two middle schools, and a senior high school, which includes the stand-alone Ninth Grade Academy and the Vollmer Alternative Education Center, make up the district.

The Senior High School is accredited by the New York State Department of Education and complies with the NACAC Statement of Principles of Good Practice.
